

We do not have to look any further than our television screens to understand where our violent youth get this message. The results of this constant barrage of violence not only manifests itself in criminal activities, but also in domestic and school situations. Hitting, kicking, shoving around, and foul language are presented as OK on the screen.

The latest ABC allowance of a sexually explicit situation on prime time Monday night football is still another example of the scummy model that TV puts forth as OK for our youth. (Please give ABC the maximum fine for this latest "in your face" exploitation of the right we give to them to appear in our living rooms.)
